

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An aiming system for billiards and like games wherein a cue is provided with a source of a narrow collimated beam of light, such as a laser pointer, to emerge from the playing tip along the longitudinal axis of the cue. In the preferred embodiment, a laser generator is positioned within the handle portion of the cue and the light therefrom moves through a longitudinal bore along the length of the cue to emerge from an apertured standard playing tip.

5

005280" T8884960